DETAILED ACTION

Response to Amendment

1. The applicant(s) amendment filed on April 14, 2006 has been fully considered and made of record.

Response to Arguments

2. The applicant(s) arguments, see pages 8-9 of the response filed on April 14, 2006, with respect to the feature of “electroplating...material” (lines 8-10 of Claim 11) have been fully considered and are persuasive. The previous rejections with respect to Chang et al and Sasaki, have been withdrawn.

The examiner further notes that while Chang et al was relied upon for the feature of electroplating a P2 pole tip, and that the P2 pole tip has a width (col. 14, lines 10-27), Chang is silent as to what dimensions are used in the actual thickness of the seed layer material (e.g. 366) and the actual thickness of the electroplated material. Thus, no corresponding relationship can be made between the width of the P2 pole tip and the thickness of the seed layer material and the thickness of the electroplated material. So Chang cannot meet the limitations of “electroplating...material” (lines 8-10 of Claim 11).

Reasons for Allowance

3. The following is an examiner’s statement of reasons for allowance.

The prior art does not teach all of the limitations of the claimed invention including fabricating a seed layer upon a sidewall of a block of material, then subsequently electroplating

Art Unit: 3729

P2 pole tip material upon the seed layer, whereby a P2 pole top is formed having a width W that is comprised of a thickness of the seed layer material and a thickness of the electroplated material.

The newly cited reference to Ohtsuka et al (U. S. Patent 5,774,308) will now be discussed. Ohtsuka teaches plating a P2 pole tip material 26a (in Fig. 5B) and then subsequently forming a seed layer (e.g. 26b) where the width W of the P2 pole tip is comprised of a thickness of the seed layer 26b and a thickness of the P2 pole tip material (shown in Fig. 5D). However, Ohtsuka does not teach that the P2 pole tip material is specifically electroplated. Moreover, Ohtsuka teaches the reverse order of steps by first forming the P2 pole tip material and then subsequently forming the seed layer. Claim 11 requires forming a seed layer and then subsequently electroplating P2 pole tip material. Therefore, Ohtsuka simply cannot meet the limitations of “forming a seed layer...electroplated material” (lines 7-10 of Claim 11).

Accordingly, Claims 11-19 are allowed.

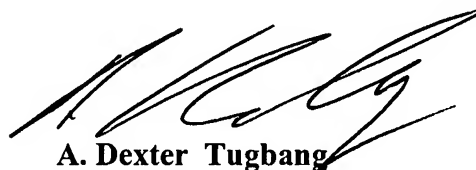

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled “Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance.”
